

Libraries launch new university research data repository

We're helping researchers and students amplify their individual or cross-departmental work, while taking our commitment to open to the next level.

ReDATA—a free research data repository that stores and shares datasets produced by University of Arizona researchers—was recently launched by the Libraries' Office of Innovation of Digital Innovation & Stewardship.

Upcoming exhibit

The Special Collections online exhibit, Founding Mothers: From the Ballot Box to the University, opens in November.

The exhibit focuses on women in Arizona and asks what strategies led to their success in winning representation at the ballot box and in the university.

Tucson Festival of Books event features Press authors

We are thrilled that the Tucson Festival of Books will feature Gary Paul Nabhan and Francisco Cantú on their online series, Authors In Conversation, on November 18, 2020.

Gary and Francisco will be discussing a new University of Arizona Press book, The Nature of Desert Nature, of which Gary is the editor and Francisco is a contributor.
